Application Platforms

Make sure that you get on the website of all colleges on your Best Suitable College List to verify which application platform it requires you to use.

HigherEdUSA highly recommend you to start with The Common Application, it is accepted by around 1,000 colleges. The University of California System has its own platform that you could use it to apply to its ten (10) UC schools. Others like MIT and Georgetown University have their own application platforms that are not used by other institutions.

In addition, most selective colleges and universities request additional supplement information. You must prepare and submit all information requested before the institution will consider your application completed.

Application Checklist

HigherEdUSA will assist you in using a formal check list to organize all necessary application materials so that you could complete the application process efficiently and effectively.

Using a checklist can help you to set goals and deadlines for each college's requirements, so that together we can keep track of what you've completed and what you still have left to finish.

ED, EA, or Regular Admissions

The college application and admission process has many uncontrollable factors.

Trying to determine the pros and cons among ED, EA and regular applications adds additional stress on most, if not all applicants.

Not all (or most) ED/EA schools may be suitable for you.

HigherEdUSA will work with you early in the process by providing guidance and support, including deciding on ED, EA, and/or regular admission.

Dear Sam,

Yes!

We are happy to offer you admission to Princeton University and are delighted to welcome you as a member of the class of 2005.

Sincerely,

Steve LeMenager
Acting Dean of Admissions

Oh, No. You got all NOs!?

Did you send in applications to too few colleges? Did you only apply to your dream schools? Did you get bad grades during your last term as a high school senior?

If, for whatever reason, you and “that college” missed each other immediately after high school, you could:

Spring Application, Late Application, Rolling Admissions. Continue to enhance your application preparation, e.g., retake SAT, and then apply for spring admission. HigherEdUSA will offer you useful information regarding Spring Intake, late application, and rolling admissions.

Final Note

Many schools use the Common Application, an online app that you can fill out once and then submit to all colleges on your Best Suitable list at once. Others, like the ten (10) schools in the University of California system, use their own application platform.

There's a lot to juggle when it comes to the final stage of college application, on top of trying to decide on ED, EA, or Regular Application. While filling out your application may only require a few weeks of your time, gathering all required application components—like your essay and recommendations—will require several months of preparation.

HigherEdUSA has seen many excellent students getting disoriented at this final actual application stage. We are committed to support you step-by-step so that you can find ways to balance it with all your other commitments.

With HigherEdUSA by your side, you will have a solid by-default plan, stay calm, keep your confidence high and hopes up to come across the finish line!
